

LOST WIFE LIVED WEEK IN OLD HOME WITHOUT ANY FOOD

Mrs. Fitzpatrick Had Wandered Back to Abandoned Residence in Flatbush.

Mrs. Alice Fitzpatrick, wife of banker Frank J. E. Fitzpatrick, was quite clear in her mind to-day at her home, No. 22 West Ninety-eighth street, and able to give what she says is a connected account of her movements from the time she disappeared on Nov. 3 until she was found last night, by a friend of the Fitzpatrick family, in a restaurant in Brooklyn. She says she spent all the time while she was missing hidden in the old home of the family at No. 721 Elmore place, Flatbush.

Inasmuch as this house is vacant and unheated and was searched from top to bottom several times by friends of the Fitzpatrick family and once by police officers, Mr. Fitzpatrick was at first disposed to be incredulous over this feature of her story. But her clothing was neat and clean when she was found last night, she had not been out in the rain of Saturday and Sunday, she still had almost all the money she had taken away on Nov. 3, and had undoubtedly gone without food since the date of her disappearance.

TELLS OF BEING POLICEMAN SEARCH HOUSE.

One thing that serves to assure Mr. Fitzpatrick that his wife is telling the truth is that she tells of a search of the house made one day by a policeman in uniform and another man. The other man was a detective. They reported that they searched the house minutely and could find no trace of the woman.

"I saw them coming and hid in a closet in the maid's room," Mrs. Fitzpatrick told her husband. "They opened the door but they didn't see me."

Mrs. Fitzpatrick is a very small woman and in good health never weighed more than one hundred pounds. To-day she does not weigh more than fifty pounds and is able to hide in the most amazing places. Mr. Fitzpatrick says that, inconceivable as it may appear, he thinks his wife did succeed in hiding herself away in the deserted Flatbush mansion.

The Fitzpatricks lived in the big frame Flatbush house until it became apparent to the husband that he should remove his wife to a smaller place. He took a flat at No. 22 West Ninety-eighth street. Mrs. Fitzpatrick was kept under the constant care of a nurse until Nov. 1, when she showed so much improvement that the nurse relaxed her vigilance and allowed the patient to go out alone.

WENT TO THE OLD HOUSE AFTER DARK.

Two days later Mrs. Fitzpatrick disappeared. She tells her husband that after walking around for some time in Manhattan she conceived an idea of going to the old home in Flatbush. She had a key and entered the house after dark.

There she remained, she says, for seven days, without anything to eat. She kept away from the windows. The sight of a policeman in uniform, she says, frightened her half to death and she remained in the closet for many hours after the two officers had departed. She tells her husband that when the house was searched after dark she had no difficulty in eluding the searchers.

To the disordered mind of the fugitive wife and mother came the impression that the Flatbush house was her real home and that her husband and children had deserted her. Dr. J. H. McKenzie of No. 22 West Ninety-eighth street and two nurses who are in charge of Mrs. Fitzpatrick say that they believe she entertained this hallucination from the time she entered the dwelling in Elmore place.

How this emaciated little wisp of a woman lived without food for a week in a cold, damp deserted house is a cause of wonder to the physician and the nurses. She admits that she was hungry all the time, but fear of being picked up by the police overcame her natural desire for food, despite the increasing cold.

Mr. Fitzpatrick is associated with the banking house of L. T. Donnerberg & Company of No. 24 Fourth avenue. The couple have two daughters who are in school at St. Elizabeth's Convent in New Jersey. They had been in deep grief over their mother's strange absence and were overjoyed to learn by telephone that she had been found.

Physician Tells How To Grow Hair

A Well-Known Physician and Newspaper Correspondent Tells How to Promote the Growth of the Hair.

A well-known physician, who has made a careful study of the hair, recently made the following statement: "It is comparatively easy to stop the hair from falling out, promote its growth and banish dandruff by the following simple recipe, which can be made at home: To 7 oz. of water add a small box of Barbo Compound, 1 oz. of bay rum and 1/4 oz. of glycerine. Apply it to the scalp with the finger tips two or three times per week. It not only is excellent as a scalp and hair tonic, but it darkens faded, streaked, gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Use it myself and have no hesitancy in recommending it to my patients. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost."—Advt.
